The AIG difference in action – Client case studies

Optimal client experience drives our execution and priorities

Issue
A global staffing firm wanted to integrate its newly formed captive into its Cyber and Errors and Omissions (E&O) global program.

Solution
AIG implemented a global fronting solution that fully met the client's financial goals while also providing evidence of contractually mandated coverage in several countries.

Why is this important?
The client was able to optimize the use of its captive, resulting in improved management of its total cost of risk in an increasingly challenging market.

Issue
A U.S.-based clothing company was looking to replace its Employment Practices Liability (EPLI) carrier and consolidate two expiring Side-A layers on its Directors and Officers (D&O) program at renewal.

Solution
Through early and proactive engagement, close teamwork, and a demonstrated knowledge of the risks, AIG successfully consolidated the program and coordinated the policy issuance for more than 20 underlyers.

Why is this important?
AIG's facilitation of the program consolidation and resulting win-back of the client's EPLI program further strengthened this important partnership.

Issue
A global health technology client put its Cyber global fronting program, which it reinsures to its cell captive, out to market.

Solution
Leveraging its previous long-term relationship with the client, along with strong multinational, fronting and captive expertise, AIG offered a solution focused on continued partnership and service delivery.

Why is this important?
The program met the client's objectives from a capacity and premium perspective and provided confidence that uninterrupted Cyber coverage was in place.
